6 READ THE PASSAGE

Ruby spotted the dog before anyone else did, shivering under the bandstand in the rain, its collar tag scratched almost unreadable.

“We can't just leave it,” she said, already crouching down with her hand held out. Her older brother Sam checked his phone.

Ruby carefully lifted the small, trembling terrier into her coat, feeling its heartbeat hammering fast against her arm. They half-walked, half-ran the ten minutes home, and Mum immediately rang the number scratched onto a spare tag loop.

Twenty minutes later, a woman arrived at the door, eyes red from crying, and dropped to her knees the second she saw the terrier peek out from Ruby's coat.

“Milo! I've been searching every street since lunchtime.” She hugged Ruby before she even reached her dog.

Where was the dog hiding when Ruby found it?

(A) under the bandstand (B) behind the school gates (C) under a parked car (D) inside a shop doorway

12 READ THE PASSAGE

> Mara pressed her forehead against the cold glass of the lighthouse window, watching the waves hurl themselves against the rocks below. Her father had been keeping this light burning for thirty years, and tonight, for the first time, he had trusted her to do it alone.
> She checked the great lamp once more, its beam sweeping steadily across the black water. Somewhere out there, ships depended on that light to avoid the jagged rocks that had wrecked so many vessels before.
> A gust rattled the old windows, and Mara shivered, pulling her coat tighter. She would not let the light go out.
> Not tonight, not ever, if she could help it.

What was Mara doing when the passage begins?

(A) fixing the lamp's wiring (B) sailing a ship (C) writing a letter to her father

(D) watching the waves from the lighthouse window

18 READ THE PASSAGE

> On the coach to the farm, Isla noticed that Ruben was sitting alone again, exactly as he had at the last two school trips. Nobody had been unkind to him, exactly — he just always seemed to end up forgotten when everyone else paired off with their usual friends.
> Isla hesitated, glancing at her own friends already saving her a seat further back, then slid in next to Ruben instead.
> “Have you been to this farm before?”
> she asked. Ruben looked surprised, then shook his head, and by the time they arrived, he had told her three separate facts about sheep that she was fairly sure he'd read specifically to prepare for the trip.
> At lunch, Ruben sat with Isla's usual group for the first time all year, quiet at first but gradually joining in the conversation about the goats they'd just fed.
> “Good idea, sitting with him. He's actually really funny once he talks.”

Who does Isla notice sitting alone on the coach?

(A) Ollie (B) Ruben (C) Freya (D) Sam

24 READ THE PASSAGE

Noah had avoided the deep end of the pool for the entire swimming course, always finding an excuse to stay near the shallow steps.

“Today's the day,” said his instructor, Miss Patel, crouching down to his eye level.

“You've got all the skills. You just haven't tried them out there yet.”

Noah's arms felt oddly heavy as he waded toward the rope marking the deep water. He glanced back once at the shallow end, then made himself keep going.

When his feet finally left the bottom, panic flickered for a second — but his arms and legs remembered exactly what they'd practised a hundred times in the shallow end. He kept moving, one stroke after another, until he reached the far wall and slapped it triumphantly.

Miss Patel was already clapping from the poolside, and for the first time all course, Noah didn't want to get out of the pool at all.

Where had Noah been avoiding for the entire course?

(A) the deep end of the pool (B) the changing rooms (C) the diving board

(D) the shallow steps

HOW TO MARK THIS ANSWER SHEET

Answer every question by drawing one straight pencil line through the box next to your chosen letter.

✓ Right
One straight line right through the box. Answer B.

✗ Wrong
A tick, or a line too short to cross the box, may not be counted.

✗ Wrong
Two boxes marked scores zero. Only ever mark one.

- Use a pencil so you can rub a mistake out completely — crossing out is not enough.
- Check the question number on the sheet matches the question you are answering.
- Where a box has no letters, write your answer neatly on the line inside it.
- Not sure? Choose your best answer and mark it — never leave a question blank.
